Description	The library was established in 1905. The museum's architect and first museum director Wilhelm Neumann had foreseen a special room for the library already in the museum's project. Up to now, the Library of the Latvian National Museum of Art was a closed library, accessible mainly to museum specialists, students, art historians and professors at art universities. The library holds nearly 30,000 books about art and culture. After the reconstruction of the museum the library's premises have been extended and today it is available to all visitors.
