Description	This site- a resource center- has been designed by combining the views of doctors, researchers and teachers, not forgetting families and... the children themselves. It offers free-access resources to facilitate schooling for children with motor coordination disorders. All our resources are based on identifying children's needs. The solutions developed to meet these needs must be medico-scientifically relevant (they must take into account the latest knowledge on dyspraxia and brain function during learning) and pedagogically sound. Finally, they must have been tested by end-users and modified according to their feedback (ease of use by the child, relevance in classroom situations etc.). You'll find : <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - lessons and exercises already adapted, - school textbooks (adapted versions)
